

Dr. A. M. “Raj” Rajendran serves as the Chief Scientist and technical advisor for the Engineering Sciences Directorate of U.S. Army Research Office, Army Research Laboratory (ARL), RTP, NC, 27709. He serves in several high-level DoD / DOE / NASA evaluation panels as a member. Dr. Rajendran is an Adjunct Professor at the North Carolina State University, Raleigh, NC. He serves in Ph.D committees and also supports National Research Council (NRC) Associates at NC State University.

Dr. Rajendran has won several research awards: ICCES -2007 Prof. Eric Reissner Medal for the original contributions to the “Impact and Penetration Mechanics” research area, 1998 - Army’s R&D achievement award, 1991-University of Dayton Research Institute’s (UDRI) top research award (Wohlleben/Hochwalt Award), and 1988-Martin-Marietta's "Manned Space Systems Award.” Dr. Rajendran has authored approximately 150 publications and over 100 presentations.

Dr. Rajendran is a Fellow of the Army Research Laboratory, Fellow of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, Associate Editor, of Journal of Computer Modeling and Simulation in Engineering, and Associate Editor, International Journal of Plasticity. Dr. Rajendran obtained his Ph.D. (1981) in Aeronautics and Astronautics (Applied Mechanics) from the University of Washington, Seattle, WA.